

The Hebrew University of Jerusalem

It's just a storm in a teacup.

The Hebrew University is a truly multicultural institution. Its doors are open to everyone, encouraging discussion of the same subjects, in the same classrooms, across the same tables.

For over 80 years, students have flocked from all over the world to study in Jerusalem. A paper boycott matters little to the 24,000 who attend classes every day: their continuing research into curing Alzheimer's, alleviating world poverty and countering bio-terrorism is what really counts.

Stand up for Israel and keep education independent. Show your support for the Hebrew University, and all Israel's thriving universities – call Julia at the British Friends of the Hebrew University on 020 7691 1474 or e-mail julia.markson@bfhu.org
